

DEEP FIELD

Look deeper.

BRAND BOOK · FIRST EDITION

DEPTH OVER NOISE

Most wine competes on volume: louder labels, bigger extraction, more adjectives. Deep Field competes on attention. One field, farmed slowly and read honestly, that holds up under a long stare.

The promise, to the buyer and the drinker alike: the more attention you give this wine, the more it gives back.

THE FIELD

A single piece of ground.
Soil, roots, place.
Lead here.

DEPTH

Of flavor, of roots, of patience. The felt quality in the glass.

THE COSMOS

Earned, never decorated:
the field is farmed by the sky.

“The longer you look, the more there is.”

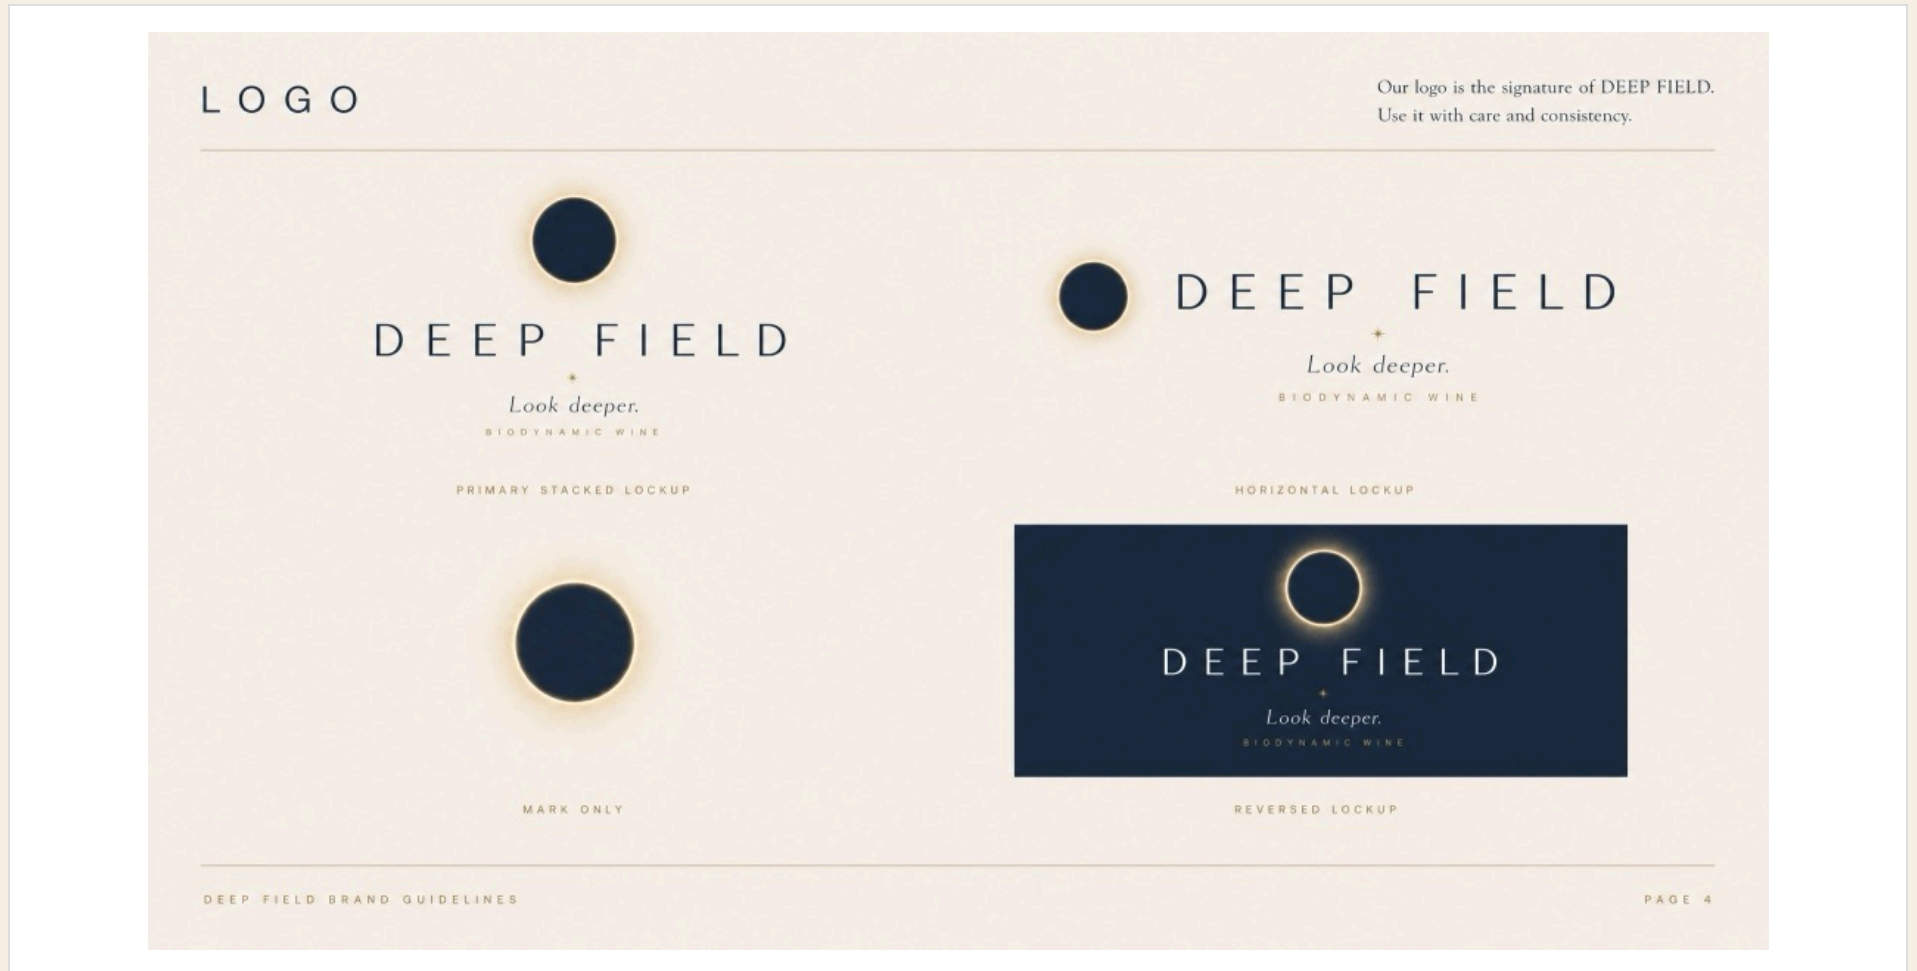

THE DEEP-FIELD RING

One clean circle that reads as an eclipse and a deep-sky aperture at once. Drawn with a fine, confident line, never thick or loud. It is deliberately a single small circle: a quiet nod to the studio that made it.

Where the mark's meaning is described, it is the eclipse and the deep sky, a circle of night and far light. Clear space equals one ring-width on all sides. Never redraw, outline, or fill the mark.

LOCKUPS AND USAGE

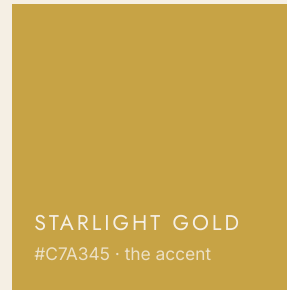

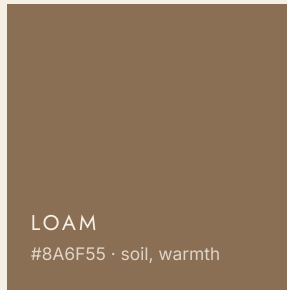

Primary stacked lockup, horizontal lockup, the ring alone, and the reversed setting on ink. The tagline is always “Look deeper.” with the period, never restyled.

NIGHT, BONE, AND STARLIGHT

BONE
#F5EFE4 · paper, light

Ink and bone carry every composition. Gold is starlight: an accent, never a field. One wine-tied tone may join per layout. If a page feels loud, it is not Deep Field.

QUIET, LETTERSPACED, EXACT

DEEP FIELD

DISPLAY · a light geometric grotesk, all caps, generously letterspaced

Look deeper. The longer you look, the more there is.

ACCENT · an italic serif, reserved for the tagline, signatures, and pull lines

Body text is a clean humanist sans, set small and unhurried, with one idea per paragraph and generous margins.

BODY · plain, warm, precise

LONG EXPOSURES, DEEP FOCUS

EDGES OF THE DAY

Shoot at dawn, dusk, and true night. The fog below, the stars above.

NEAR AND FAR, BOTH SHARP

Deep depth of field: a leaf and the horizon in one focused frame.

HONEST WORK

Real hands, real soil, documentary light. Nothing staged glossy.

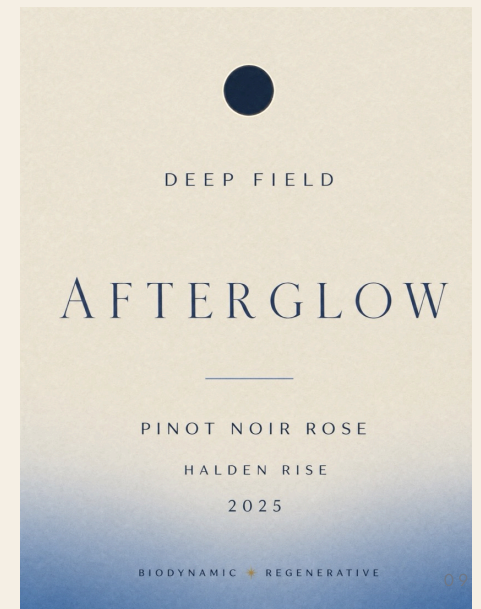

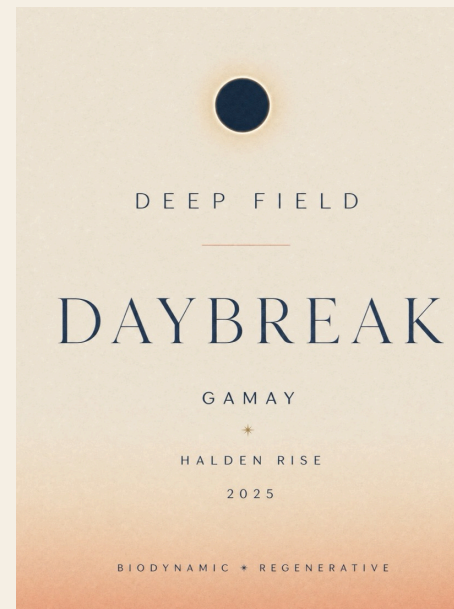

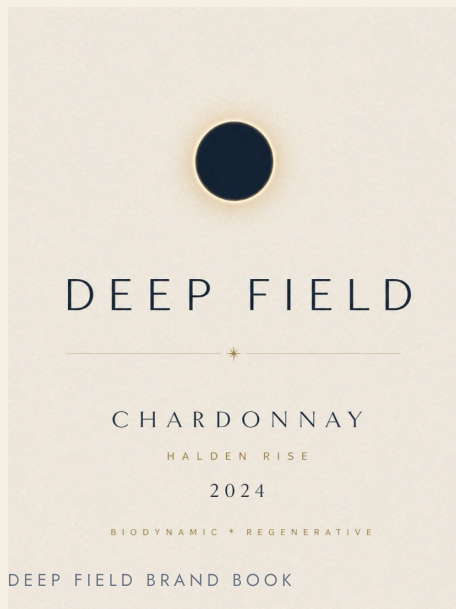

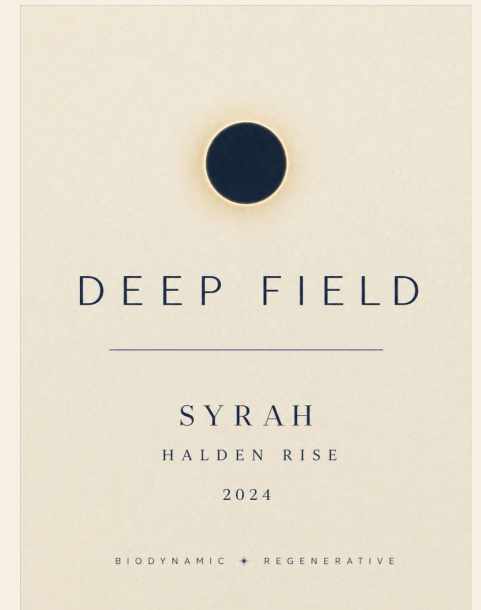

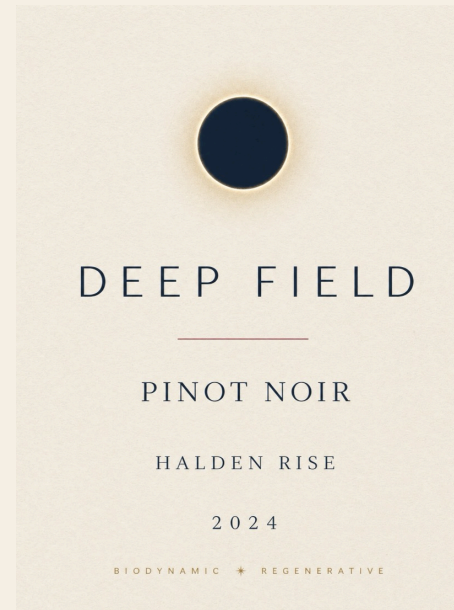

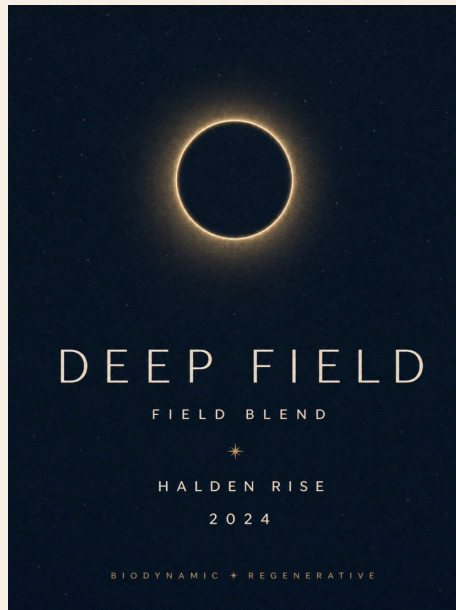

MARNE OKAFOR

Marne came to wine through the sky. For years she was an astrophotographer, holding long exposures open long enough for faint, far things to arrive. She kept returning to one ridge above the fog because the nights were dark, until the ground under her tripod mattered as much as the sky above it.

So she began to farm it, by the same sky. Biodynamics is farming by the cosmos: the same moon and stars now schedule the work. Long exposures, deep focus, nothing rushed.

“The longer you look, the more there is.”

DETAIL IS THE LUXURY

The capsule: ink foil, one gold ring.

The cork: fire-stamped ring, field and site.

The press kit: one page, one bottle, one lens.

Farmed and certified: biodynamic, regenerative organic, and organic. The biodynamic mark wins the natural list, the regenerative mark wins the sustainability-minded chain, and the organic mark reassures the cautious first-timer.

SAY LESS, MEAN IT

SAY THIS

“One field, farmed by the sky. Nothing rushed and nothing hidden.”

Short sentences. Concrete nouns. Dry warmth. It states the true thing plainly and stops.

NOT THIS

“An award-worthy, ultra-premium, handcrafted luxury wine experience!”

No hype, no exclamation points, no adjectives doing the work the wine should do.
